Employee Communication: Gender Pay Gap Reporting 2023

We are an employer required by law to carry out Gender Pay Reporting under the Equality Act 2010 (Gender Pay Gap Information) Regulations 2017. This involves carrying out six calculations that show the difference between the average earnings of men and women in our organisation; it will not involve publishing individual employee's data.

Central Employment strongly believes in equality, diversity and inclusion in all areas, including pay. Whilst it is a legal duty to report on the Gender Pay gap as a business, it is also an area we have a vested interest in, particularly the elimination of any gender pay gap.

We can use these results to assess:

- The levels of gender equality in our workplace
- The balance of male and female employees at different levels
- How effectively talent is being maximised and rewarded

This report, in accordance with the legislation, shows the average earnings across all levels of the organisation for all PAYE workers. For a recruitment business like ours, this means that as well as corporate staff data we have also included data regarding the temporary workers that we place with our clients. Out of a total 379 staff, 90.5% of our data for the reporting period relates to temporary workers that we place with our clients, with only 9.5% relating to our internal staff who we have the most direct control over in regard to pay rates and bonuses.

Gender Pay Reporting requires our organisation to make calculations based on employee gender. We will establish this by using our existing HR and payroll records. All employees can confirm and update their records if they choose to by contacting Central Employment Agency (North East) Limited.

Hourly pay of employees paid for period within snapshot date of 5th April 2022:

Mean Male – Female 11.72% Median Male – Female -3.12%

Hourly pay of employees paid for period within snapshot date of 5th April 2021:

Mean Male – Female 8.43% Median Male – Female -21.47%

The 2021 data shows that females are paid 11.72% less than males less than males using the mean calculation, and 3.12% more than males using the median. This data includes all of our temporary workers that we place with our clients as well as our internal staff. Whilst the median average suggests that female workers earned more than males, the higher proportion of male staff to female (264 males to 115 females) would suggest a smaller range for female employees, thus a higher median average.

The higher proportion of males is expected given that Central Employment's client portfolio predominantly consists of minimum wage Industrial, Manufacturing and Automotive roles; industries that are heavily male dominated. However, all of our client pay rates are non-discriminatory on gender, offering equal hourly pay rates regardless of gender.

When looking at the percentage of women and men in each quartile, there has also been an improvement. Whilst there were less females within the middle quartile, and although the upper quartile still has a higher percentage of men than women (82.1% to 17.9% respectively), these figures have improved since 2021 suggesting progress has been made. Although it is difficult to guarantee future progress in this quartile for female candidates placed with our clients, it is likely there will be continuous improvement in this area at least for our internal staff, following continuous development and promotions of female staff.

Bonus pay - 12 months to April 2022:

Mean	Male – Female	-37.64%
Median	Male – Female	-56.70%

Bonus pay - 12 months to April 2021:

Mean	Male – Female	17.57%
Median	Male – Female	12.70%

As well as the improvements illustrated within the hourly rates, the gap between bonus payments between male and female staff has also reduced and thus, improved. The median average of female workers receiving a bonus increased from £542.80 to £1037.21, but the percentage of female employees receiving a bonus has decreased from 19.6% to 12.4%. Despite a lower percentage of females receiving a bonus, their median was higher than males by 56.7%. However, again this is due to a lower range of bonuses due to their being less females to males. When comparing the mean average of bonuses females still had a higher average, but the gap is slightly smaller at 37.64%.

Proportion of Males & Females receiving a bonus. Males: 25.30% Females 12.40%

As with pay rates, Central Employment also has no influence on which of its temporary workers receive bonuses from its clients, if any, and at what percentage they are offered. Therefore, without looking solely at internal staff member's bonuses, the results will always be waved leading to some inaccuracy.

Central Employment is proud to have such a wide-ranging client portfolio across several different industries. However, when reporting on the Gender Pay Gap this plays a large factor on the results. Central Employment has limited, if any, influence on the pay rates of temporary staff with these being left to decide by the client. However, despite this, the rates used for our temporary staff placed at our clients are non-discriminatory on gender.

As previously mentioned, Central Employment only has direct control over 9.5% of its staff, specifically those hired internally. Within this group, we take pride in investing in our staff through a number of ways, something that has led to high retention rates of our staff. Eventually, with these high retention rates and the investment we put into all our staff, the gap should hopefully reduce even further.

Through offering structured development, qualifications in recruitment, ongoing professional development, career progression opportunities, individual performance based commission, flexible working, flexible benefits and much more, we truly believe in the power of equal opportunities for all.

We are proud to have diversity at the heart of what we do. From our flexible working, flexible benefits, enhanced maternity and paternity pay, excellent training & development, accredited apprenticeship programme, structured career paths and more. We will continue to improve these areas, with particular focus on adopting a more agile and flexible approach to work.

As members of the Equality Standard North East since 2015 Central Employment Agency embraces diversity and will seek to promote the benefits of diversity in all of our business activities. We will seek to develop a business culture that reflects that belief. We will seek to widen the media in which we recruit to ensure as diverse an employee and candidate base as possible. We will strive to make sure that our clients meet their own diversity targets.

We are fully committed to continue promoting our equality and diversity programmes, and ensuring we offer equal opportunities for everyone. We pride ourselves on our internal promotion rate, our training & development programmes and the opportunities we offer everyone for a rewarding career.
